Mirror Stage (shade on mirror)

The mirror stage is an important concept in the development of the child's understanding of the self. In the early years, children often project their own images onto others, identifying with them. This is because the mirror stage is a critical period in which children begin to recognize and understand their own reflection. The mirror stage typically occurs between the ages of two and four years old.

In the mirror stage, children start to recognize themselves in the mirror and begin to associate specific emotions and behaviors with the reflection they see. This is a crucial step in the development of self-awareness and self-identity. As children become more familiar with their own reflection, they begin to distinguish between their own actions and those of others. This is an important aspect of social development, as it allows children to understand the perspectives of others.

The mirror stage is often described as a period of exploration and discovery, during which children learn to understand their own body and its abilities. It is a time when children begin to develop a sense of who they are and how they fit into the world around them. The mirror stage is an important foundation for future development and learning, as it provides children with a basic understanding of their own identity and the world around them.
